NAZIS CLAIM HUGE SUCCESS FOR THE CAMPAIGN NOW ON

German Officials Describe It As "Last Stage Before Final Showdown"

PRELUDE TO THE 'BLITZ'

Announce Aims: Decimation of R. A. F., Destruction of Key Naval Harbors

By Pierre J. Huss

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, Aug. 12.—In what German officials described as "the last stage before the final showdown," Nazi planes roared along the battered coast of Britain again today as the High Command claimed a "bag" of 90 British craft and eight barrage balloons.

The large-scale aerial operations began yesterday and continued today will broaden in intensity. Nazi quarters indicated, with these aims in view as a prelude to the final blitzkrieg—

1. Decimation of the Royal Air Force.

2. Destruction of key British naval harbors.

3. Disruption of vital industries and airports throughout the British Isles.

Even as a new battle between RAF planes and the Germans got underway, Nazi spokesmen claimed huge success for the campaign now raging.

All units of the air force and the German Navy are co-operating in what is obviously a gigantic offensive to weaken England's defenses in preparation for the final blow.

While huge bombing planes are engaged in destroying major bases, smaller harbors are being sealed with mines, it was said, and the Channel itself being swept clear of such weapons by German mine-sweepers.

The dispatch did not elaborate on the latter point, but the obvious inference was that the Channel is being cleared to enable a mass German invasion by sea.

Inaugurate 3 Mail Pick-Up Routes

(By International News Service)

Philadelphia, Aug. 12.—Hailed as a "tremendous aid" to business in every section of Pennsylvania, three air mail pick-up routes inaugurated permanent service today to 56 communities in the Keystone State, 21 in West Virginia, four in Delaware and two in New York.

The routes stretch between Pittsburgh and Huntington, W. Va.; Pittsburgh and Philadelphia via Harrisburg and Pittsburgh and Jamestown, N. J. Many of the points served in the new program were included in the year's experimental pick-up service concluded last May.

Chief value of the pick-up lines, operated by All-American Aviation, Inc., of Wilmington, Del., is that it will save a day in delivery of mail. Direct service to small communities eliminates the day's delay in transporting mail by train from air terminals in large cities.

S. LANGHORNE ENFORCES 'NO PARKING' ORDINANCE

Goes Into Effect When Bellevue Avenue Improvements Are Completed This Week

LIGHT ALLOCATIONS

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Aug. 12.—South Langhorne's "no parking" ordinance is to be strictly enforced, it going into effect upon the completion of the resurfacing of Bellevue avenue, borough councilmen state.

The State paid part of the expense involved in the rebuilding of Bellevue avenue, and in doing this the State also stipulated that parking be restricted to one side of the street.

An ordinance to this effect was passed at the March 4th meeting of Council and parking is now permissible on the East side of the street only. No enforcement could be made until the street, then in the course of reconstruction, could be finished.

With the end of street repairs now in sight Council is going ahead with plans for purchase of no-parking signs and is also taking other necessary steps for this enforcement.

Council also planned to take steps to have electric light poles and street lights relocated in the new real estate development in the lower end of the borough. With the cutting through of new streets adequate lighting facilities will be necessary and it was felt that relocating existing lights to street corners at Oak and Holly avenues would take care of this problem.

The street committee reported that several properties had sidewalks badly in need of repair. Council moved to have these owners notified in order that improvements and repairs could be made.

C. Adam Schock made an application to make an addition to his dance hall along the highway. This application was turned over to the newly-appointed Adjustment Committee which acts under the Zoning Ordinance. This committee acts on applications for permits that do not meet the specifications set forth in the Zoning Ordinance. In order to give a permit under these circumstances the committee must seek the permission of property owners who would be influenced by this change in property construction.

Senator Barkley Proposes Expansion of Program

By Robert A. McGill
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(INS)—Senate majority leader Barkley proposed today that the conscription program be expanded by a continuous inventory of men between 21 and 45 for possible emergency military and defense service.

He said it would be a "good idea" to authorize the War Department to register all men between these ages once a year. The pending conscription bill calls for a single registration of men between 21 and 31 for a year's military training.

Barkley emphasized, however, that he was not advocating compulsory military training for those who would come under the yearly registration. It would merely give the War Department a continuous index to a large reservoir of men who would be used for military and industrial service in a sudden emergency.

He advanced his proposal as the Senate entered its third day of debate on the conscription bill, accompanied by behind-the-scenes maneuvering for support for various amendments and a challenge that the issue be submitted to a popular referendum.

"We ought to have information on those men who would be available for industrial defense work as well as those who might be called for military service in a sudden emergency," Barkley said.

He discussed his proposal with reporters after opposing the Burke amendment to expand the military service age bracket from 21 to 45.

Italy Claims Forces Making Rapid Strides

Rome, Aug. 12.—Italy claimed today that its forces in British Somaliland were making rapid strides in the advance in Berbera, main objective of the offensive, and had contacted the main British forces near the Gulf of Aden.

If Berbera falls, the Italians will have gained virtual control of British Somaliland and will be in position to threaten Britain's control of the Gulf of Aden.

It Duce's legions, according to Italian officials, have now passed the desert region and crossed the mountain ranges. They have reached the main motor road to Berbera.

The Street Committee reported that all necessary patching will be done by August 19th, when about half the streets will be given a tar and chip top dressing.

Over 200 Planes Locked In Combat

London, Aug. 12.—An air battle expected to exceed any in history got under way over the English Channel, and the Thames estuary today, with at least 12 Nazi planes brought down and more than 200 German and R. A. F. craft locked in combat.

A brief announcement by the Air Ministry told of Adolf Hitler's latest and most violent pre-Blitzkrieg against the British Isles.

The statement said that "large enemy activity" was taking place over a wide area of the channel and the Thames estuary. The German high command said one violent raid was directed against Portsmouth, chief British naval base.

The Thames estuary lies between Southend and Sheerness and all vital shipping must pass through it.

DOYLESTOWN FIREMEN OBJECT TO SMALL PIPES

Will Protest to Borough Council Over Laying Four-Inch Mains

COSTS NOT MUCH LESS

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 12.—Firemen here have protested the laying of four-inch water mains in the borough. Council had planned to lay a four-inch main on Pine Road, a thoroughfare leading off of Union street, running toward North Main, and another four-inch main on North Clinton street, north of Doyle.

Assistant Fire Chief Jay Richar pointed out that it is not wise to lay new four-inch water mains running off a six-inch main. "Just because we have a few old ones is no reason why others should be put in," he said.

Trustee Wilson H. Swartley, who protested, said he thinks there is an ordinance prohibiting the laying of additional four-inch mains. Assistant Chief Nick Petrillo said it shouldn't be allowed by Borough Council.

"It costs just as much to dig the ditch for a four-inch main as it does for a six-inch and the extra cost for pipe means so much more in safety and protection," said Trustee Swartley.

Vice-President Harold F. Hellyer, who presided in the absence of Justice of the Peace W. Carlile Hobensack, assured the firemen that a delegation will attend a meeting of Borough Council and file a protest.

Assistant Chief Petrillo asked for the co-operation of County Seat firemen, who have blue lights on their cars, in driving to a fire.

Asserting that not all the cars which have blue lights on them, and are driven much too fast for safety, are owned and operated by firemen, Assistant Chief Petrillo said: "They are not all firemen but the fire company will get the name of being 'cowboys' if the speeding and reckless driving keeps on." He made a plea that the firemen take their time and not drive too fast in order to report duty.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

Newtown Borough Council has been advised that street signs indicating allowable speeds had been received and will be erected.

Twenty-five miles an hour on State street and 35 miles an hour on Washington avenue have been approved by the State Highway Department.

Council decided to have the officers, strictly enforce these limits. According to complaints received there has lately been considerable speeding on the streets and some narrow escapes from serious accidents.

The Street Committee reported that all necessary patching will be done by August 19th, when about half the streets will be given a tar and chip top dressing.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

It Backfired

Washington, Aug. 10. THE celerity with which Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, without being asked, recently rushed forward with his views on the subject of the Hatch Act and campaign contributions deserves more notice than it got.

He not only gave a splendid, spirited, and entirely voluntary interpretation of the act but advocated amendments calculated to perfect and strengthen it.

ORDINARILY, this would seem to call for commendation rather than criticism. So it would this time but for the fact that—in a minor way, of course—it belongs in the same class as the shoddy hypocrisy of the third-term "draft" which was so degradingly obvious at Chicago. Personally, Mr. Jack-

The contract for this work was awarded to Kopper's Product Company and William W. Fabian & Son.

The report of the borough treasurer, W. Aubrey Merrick, showed a balance in the general fund at the beginning of the meeting of $1625.45. Of this $1048.30 was taxes collected during the month.

At a meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Midway Fire Company held in the assembly room of the fire house, at Lahaska, it was reported that the total receipts for the women's share in the carnival for four nights amounted to $1119.95, which is "box-office" on anybody's carnival grounds. Mrs. Howard Carver was the general chairman.

It was pointed out that these receipts represent the women's sales of their division of the carnival, including a novelty table, lawn set, refreshments of various kinds and "smokes." The exact profit has not been determined since the carnival only closed on Saturday evening.

Miss Nellie Magill, the president, was in charge, and 20 members were present. President Magill extended an invitation for all the women workers, of whom there are many, to affiliate themselves with the auxiliary.

An unusual and decided lull in fire-fighting business on the part of Silverdale firemen was disclosed in the report of Chief F. W. Benner submitted before 28 members in attendance at the August session.

Chief Benner pointed out that the company had not been called during the past three months which record proved exceptionally outstanding in view of the fact that numerous severe electrical storms had passed over the protective area under the company's jurisdiction. He also asserted that the company had engaged in four practice drills held weekly on Monday evenings during the current month, authorizing similar drills for the last two Mondays in August.

Speeders, reckless drivers, and persons permitting weeds to grow on their properties, came in for a heavy scoring by Quakertown Council.

The police committee was instructed to notify the police to "bear down" on reckless drivers, and the Burgess will take care of those who do not cut their weeds.

Bicyclists who ride on pavements, and ride without lights at night are also warned to obey the law.

Five members of the League of Women Voters "sat in" on the meeting which was short, ending at 9:35 when Council went into another executive session that lasted an hour.

President Inspects Defense Facilities

The White House yacht Potomac cruised into this naval base this forenoon to enable the Chief Executive to see for himself how rapidly men are being trained as sailors to man the projected "navy second to none."

National Guardsmen Unlimber Heavy Guns

LISBON, N. Y., Aug. 12.—(INS)—Pennsylvania's 14,000 national guardsmen unlimbered their heavy guns today to engage in the most ambitious military maneuvers yet attempted by the entire 28th division camped around this Upper New York State community.

Arrival of five field artillery regiments and one coast artillery regiment set the scene for the beginning of large-scale PNG activities. This week will be intensive reinforced brigade problem work culminating a three day "problem" involving the whole division.

Up to today, activities of the Keystone State's citizen soldiers consisted of drill, shakedown exercises and preliminary, tentative battalion maneuvers. Now concrete plans can be mapped to withstand a mythical "attack" against New York State later this month—the crux of Uncle Sam's largest peace-time war games.

Completing the State's PNG contingent over the week-end came 4800 men manning powerful 75 and 155-mm. howitzers of field artillery regiments and three-inch anti-aircraft guns of the 213th coast artillery. The latter has headquarters at nearby Heuvelton and includes batteries from Allentown, Reading, Bethlehem, Easton and Lancaster.

Artillery detachments also arrived from Wilkes-Barre, Pittsburgh, Phoenixville, Philadelphia and Harrisburg. The guardsmen had nothing to do Sunday but attend church services and greet thousands of visitors who swarmed into the area.

TOO HOT TO WORK

When the August fly is carrying his song of degrees to C above the ledger line and the taxpayer, who is sometimes described as a horny-handed son of toil, is fighting the heat and humidity between the corn rows in the low ground—or while engaged in other mental tasks—it doesn't help much to read a dispatch from Washington saying that when "the effective temperature" goes to 84 in the national capital Uncle Sam's hired hands knock off and go home, unless they are working in an air-conditioned building. Sometimes, according to this report, they quit within an hour or two after reporting for work.

The taxpayer is hastily assured that personnel officers do not just let the employees off when the first effects of heat are felt. A complex and carefully worked out method determines when they are to quit. Dr. Ben F. Jones, of the Public Health Service, surrounded by charts, graphs and instruments in his office, explains how the system works.

Experiments have determined, it seems, that "an effective temperature of 84 degrees generally is regarded as the danger point." When that temperature is reached government employees (of whom there are now a million) go home. "Effective temperature" is not just an ordinary 84 degrees on a thermometer outside the kitchen door, but a complicated combination of outside temperature and relative humidity obtained by reading wet and dry bulb thermometers and comparing them on a curved line graph.

Nobody has ever denied that it is cooler in winter and hotter in summer in the national capital than in almost any city in this country, but it has never been found necessary to apply conscription to get men and women to work for the government in Washington. Persons in private employment probably find that they have to work right on, in an environment that is not air-conditioned, even when "the effective temperature" ranges far above 84, according to the charts and graphs.

So this little story about government employees going back home an hour or so after they have reported for duty, because it is too hot to work, is calculated to add something to the blood pressure of the drudges who support the government.

DUTY TO OURSELVES

If the nation is really in earnest about building up a war defense organization, why should there be hesitancy on the part of government about taking such steps as may be necessary to accumulate raw materials required for manufacture of equipment needed to make an army efficient in the modern sense?

The steel industry contends that there is enough scrap steel in this country to meet its ordinary needs for only six weeks. Representatives of independent steel companies purpose asking for an extension of the partial ban on exportation of No. 1 steel scrap to cover No. 2, declaring that both grades are essential to the nation's purpose of defense.

Our first duty is to ourselves. We plan for defense against aggression from any source. That plan fails at its beginning if we neglect to make whatever accumulations of material are necessary to make defense possible.

You can tell a woman's age. Note whether she calls a man of forty "mature" or "that old thing."

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol Nov. 14, 1878. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

Last Friday the constable was out of town, and Saturday morning when he visited the town house, which had been left open during his absence so as to allow those who frequent it easy entrance and exit, he found a tramp who had been there since the Thursday previous, not having had in the meantime anything to eat or drink, as he had been taken sick, and not being able to get out, had been compelled to stay there until he was discovered on Saturday, when his condition was at once made more comfortable, and his case given the attendance it deserved.

Dr. J. Gibson Hunt, of Philadelphia, has consented to give a microscopic exhibition for the benefit of the Bristol Library, Friday evening of next week at Cabene's Hall. Dr. Hunt is a specialist in microscopism, and as his exhibition will be accompanied by stereoptical illustrations, it will be an opportunity well worth taking advantage of, as an exhibition of this kind is rarely seen outside of the cities, or some of the colleges.

We have information that Richard E. Shaw proposes going west and has sold out his furniture establishment on Mill street, to Benjamin O. Eitenger.

The new gas holder at the gas works is completed, and work upon the other improvements there are progressing as rapidly as circumstances will admit.

At the meeting of the school board last week, the resignation of Mrs. Mitchell, recently appointed teacher, was received and accepted, and Miss Brady, residing at Penn Valley, was chosen to fill the vacancy.

The colony which has been forming in our borough will not go West until some time next Spring. But next Tuesday, Pierson H. Lott, George Lilly, John S. Kelly, and George Snear, propose going to Kansas as pioneers to look for a suitable location for the proposed colony.

The Institute was crowded again on Tuesday evening, and as announced last week, the program was an attractive one. The exercises were opened with a piano solo by Mrs. Edwin Wilson; Harold Peirce followed with an address describing the period of Jewish history connected with the life and death of Judas Maccabees; a vocal duet by Miss Maggie A. Bache and Miss Kate May.

MORRISVILLE—Mrs. Marion Mitchell, wife of Harry Mitchell, of Trenton, was buried from the M. E. Church Tuesday afternoon. She was a daughter of Mr. Williams, of the firm of Brady & Williams, formerly of this place.

The Lyceum commenced on Saturday evening last. The subject for debate next Saturday evening is "Resolved that the government of the United States should appropriate funds for the erection of a monument at Morrisville, in memory of Robert Morris."

At a meeting held at the Presbyterian Church, last Friday evening, the following named persons were elected trustees: Messrs. Joseph C. Taylor, David H. Taylor, Mahlon Moon, Sr., Edward Kirkbride, Charles Parsons and Isha V. Smith. The Ladies Mite Society of the church has appointed a committee to have the church insured.

"The GLASS SLIPPER"

by MIGNON G. EBERHART

SYNOPSIS

Rue Hatterick married the noted surgeon, Brule Hatterick, ten months after the death of his first wife, Crystal. Rue had nursed Crystal in her fatal illness. The marriage is platonic, Brule having told Rue frankly that the reason he wanted her for his wife was because of his 15-year-old daughter, Madge. The latter resents Rue, but Rue has a staunch ally in Steven Hendrie, Crystal's step-brother and well known composer. The night of her social debut, Rue is disappointed when Brule sends his assistant and protegee, Dr. Andrew Crittenden, to escort her to the opera in his place. Andy seems surprised to see Alicia Pelham, Steven's fiancée and Crystal's best friend, at the opera. He stuns Rue with the announcement: "They believe Crystal was murdered!" Rue is suspected, of course. Andy says poison was the only explanation of her death. He takes Rue to a nearby drugstore for a sedative. As they emerge, they see Alicia entering Brule's coupe at the theatre entrance, but Rue believes they must be mistaken. Andy professes his love for Rue and begs her to go away with him. Rue repulses him, saying she did not commit murder and will not leave Brule. Arriving home, Rue finds Detectives Miller and Funk waiting to question her. It was when she was asked if she had given Crystal any drugs that Rue remembered a significant incident which she does not disclose to the police. She had given Crystal the medicine which Juliet Gardner, the day nurse, had prepared and left on the table. When she took it, Crystal remarked its bitterness, saying, "Andy must have changed my medicine today." After the detectives go, Andy takes his leave warning Rue to say nothing. Arriving home at 1:30, Brule tells Rue he consented to the exhumation of Crystal's body and they will soon know the truth. Next afternoon, Juliet Gardner, the day nurse, calls on Rue. Juliet, usually a teetotaler, is intoxicated. She mumbles incoherently about their knowing something of Crystal's murder but will not divulge it. Rue gives her a cup of tea to sober her. Shortly after, Juliet topples to the floor, dead. As Rue kneels beside her, Alicia appears and cries shrilly, "So you've done it again!"

CHAPTER ELEVEN

There was, no mistaking her meaning. It cut as sharply clear through the fog of horror and bewilderment as the thrust of a knife. But Alicia repeated it: "You've done it again. It's the way Crystal died. Poison. I suppose the nurse knew and threatened you. She knew it and came here and—Where are you going?" Rue's feet were talking her across the room; she felt disembodied and light and had no consciousness of moving.

"Stop. What are you doing?" Alicia was following her, her small face thrust forward, her eyes so bright and hard they were feral; the savagery of her attack was at sharp variance to her civilized, sophisticated appearance.

"I'm sending for the police," said Rue, too bewildered to reason. She rang the bell.

Alicia cried: "The police! Are you going to give yourself up?" "I didn't murder her. I didn't murder Crystal!"

Alicia said more thoughtfully, watching Rue: "You were here when Crystal died. She was better; she ought not to have died. She was in your care when her—extremely unexpected death took place. And you married Brule."

"If Brule were here—"

"If Brule were here he'd know," "Yes, madam," said Gross, opening the door. "You rang—" he began and saw Julie.

to stop short and then suck inward sharply. He turned quite gray and became instantly helpless, turning blank pale eyes to Alicia for direction.

"What . . ." he wavered, and Alicia said quickly: "The lady is dead. She's been murdered. In this room." How Alicia must hate her, thought Rue swiftly. And how well, up to now, she had hidden that hatred. There was no time to think of that; not with Julie lying dead. Yet, if Alicia had been a dozen Alicias, Rue was still Mrs. Hatterick.

"Gross. Look at me."

"There's the cup the poor girl drank from. Look carefully so you'll remember, Steven," said Alicia.

"Y—yes, madam." He did so with reluctance. Obviously he preferred to take orders from Alicia. Rue said stiffly:

"Get Doctor Hatterick on the phone. He should be in the office now. I'll talk to him."

"Yes, madam." He took the telephone on the bed table. Both she and Alicia could hear in that quiet room the vibration of the office girl's voice.

"He's not in, madam," said Gross helplessly, looking over the ivory telephone at the little heap on the rug. "He's not in."

"Ask where he can be found," "She says try the hospital—"

Rue had remembered Steven. "Very well. Do so. But first call Mr. Steven."

"Yes, madam." He put down the telephone quickly, with obvious relief, and vanished.

"Steven?" said Alicia. "Why not the police?"

Rue was again conscious of Alicia's bright, oddly triumphant eyes watching her. She must pull herself together, think clearly, make no mistakes. If they couldn't find Brule, then she herself must act; not Alicia, not Steven. It had been a mistake to say they would call the police; there was no reason—no real reason—to believe that Juliet had been murdered. First they must have a doctor; it would be his place to say why Julie had died. And if he said murder—then the police.

Julie. Rapidly Rue went back to the years of their acquaintance. Julie never drank—yet she'd been drinking them. And Julie, inexperienced, would have been so easy to poison in that way because she wouldn't have been able to distinguish the taste of the poison. A strong hypnotic, say, with no nausea.

Steven Hendrie, taking three steps at a time, reached the top of the stairway and flung himself through the doorway.

"Gross said—" began Steven and saw Julie and stopped as Gross had done. "Good grief! Is she really—dead? What happened? Rue, tell me—"

"We've got to have a doctor. If we can't find Brule, then someone else," said Rue.

Alicia smiled the faintest, thinnest little smile and said: "Why not

LOOKING FORWARD

By Franklyn Waltman

Publicity Director, Republican National Committee

New Deal apologists desperately are struggling to make it appear that the new chairman of the Democratic National Committee, selected in the White House with the blessing of President Roosevelt to run his third term campaign, possesses all the virtues of his predecessor, James A. Farley.

There is as much difference between Jim Farley and Ed Flynn as there is between day and night. Farley was a hard-hitting, practical politician who played the game according to the orthodox rules. But if anyone ever found a shady spot in Jim Farley's career, it has not been revealed to this writer—who incidentally has been on the lookout for such a revelation. Farley, in spite of general belief, was never a part of Tammany Hall.

But Flynn, despite his frequent donning of a Prince Albert coat and gates ajar collar, is tainted with all the defects and sins of the big city Democratic machines. He is one with Ed Kelly of Chicago and Frank Hague of New Jersey.

Persons who are close to the New Deal in the past have said a great deal worse about him. One such witness is Mayor Fiorella LaGuardia of New York City. There is no warmer, more ardent supporter of the New Deal than Mayor LaGuardia. We do not know what he thinks about Ed Flynn today, but in 1933 he had a rather low opinion of the man who is now running the Roosevelt campaign.

In the New York Times of October 24, 1933, we find the following story: "F. H. LaGuardia, Fusion candidate for Mayor, bitterly attacked Joseph V. McKee, his Recovery Party opponent, and Edward J. Flynn, Democratic leader of the Bronx, last night as protectors of graft, racketeering and exploitation."

"He accused them of conniving with unscrupulous contractors to cheat labor on city jobs of its just wages; he charged them with responsibility for the suicide of Louis H. Willard, a Hofstadter committee witness, and he said that the former Aldermanic President was a candidate in this campaign 'because Ed Flynn had the goods on him'."

A little further on in this story, it is recounted that Mayor LaGuardia asserted that "Ed Flynn of the Bronx is as low and as vicious as Croker or as Boss Tweed, and he couldn't find another person who was low enough to be his candidate, and they made Joe McKee the candidate because Ed Flynn has the goods on him."

Those are pretty harsh words even from so brutally frank a person as Mayor LaGuardia. We do not know whether they are true but that is what New York's present Mayor said about Ed Flynn and now Mr. LaGuardia is one of the New Deal's most sympathetic friends.

In 1938, Thomas E. Dewey, the fearless rackets prosecutor in New York County, had some things to say about Ed Flynn. For instance, he called attention to the fact that Flynn when Sheriff of the Bronx in 1925 named as a Deputy Sheriff the notorious "Dutch Schultz" Fliegenheimer, whom Mr. Dewey described as "the trigger man for Legs Diamond and Gwney Madden." Schultz, it will be recalled, figured in the famous case of Jimmy Hines, the Tammany leader, sent to the penitentiary by Thomas E. Dewey.

Mr. Dewey on that occasion also recalled that six months after naming "Dutch Schultz" as his Deputy Sheriff, Flynn was appointed Chamberlain of the City of New York to have "custody of trust funds belonging to widows and orphans."

"You all know," Mr. Dewey continued, "the record of the City Chamberlain's office under boss Flynn's administration. You all know about the notorious State Title and Mortgage Company, many of whose officers have since been convicted of crimes. You all remember how $6,500,000 of these trust funds were invested in so-called guaranteed mortgages and certificates; how more than one-third of that amount, over $2,000,000, was invested in certificates of the State Title and Mortgage Company. It is this man to whom widows and orphans whose funds he had held in trust look in vain for payment on the investment of their funds."

"Now the damage caused by Flynn's reckless investment of other people's money wasn't really known until the crash came sometime later. And when the crash came, where was Ed Flynn? Again he had been promoted. He had arrived at the exalted office he now holds—Secretary of State of the State of New York, at $12,000 a year, by appointment of the Governor of the State of New York!"

Samuel Seabury, another battler for decency in New York City, several years ago said he saw no difference between the then Boss Curry of Tammany Hall and Boss Flynn of the Bronx, since "both stand for the same Tammany system of government, the purpose of which is to allow them to fatten on political spoils and to use the people's money for that purpose." And now Ed Flynn moves on to the national scene. His choice as Democratic Chairman was indeed an apt one as it symbolized the big city corrupt political machine support which made possible the third term nomination of Mr. Roosevelt and because it brings out into the open the unsavory alliance of the New Deal with such political machines. At last the hypocrisy which has been so large a part of the New Deal becomes apparent to all!

HOW TO BE YOUR OWN DECORATOR

By

Helen Koues

Director, Good Housekeeping Studio

Is Your Guest Room Comfortable?

Perhaps there is no better way to discover the condition of your guest room than to occupy it yourself occasionally to find out its faults and virtues. With this in mind, let us consider what a guest room requires. To begin with, it must have an air of hospitality as if it were waiting for its occupant. If the room is to be occupied by two people, it must have two beds, a bureau, and a chest of drawers. A room to be occupied by one person may have a double or a single bed. In a smaller room either a bureau or a chest of drawers is all that is required. And remember that no matter how pretty the room, if the spring and mattresses are not comfortable, your guests will not be comfortable.

HELEN KOUES

Good Housekeeping
Studio

Another great element of comfort, and one often neglected, is proper lighting of the mirror which the guest is to use. The bureau should be so placed that the mirror above it is properly lighted by day and night. There should be a lamp on the night table or proper lighting over the head of the beds so that even the weekend guests may read themselves to sleep if they so desire. A comfortable chair is, of course, a necessity and it is nice, if possible, to have a small chaise longue drawn up either by a window or by an open fire should the room be fortunate enough to have a fireplace. One or two side chairs which match the other furniture are there as a matter of course.

A writing table is another article of furniture which it is well to put in the guest room. The leisure of a visit often makes it possible to do a bit of writing. A desk with a drawer is sufficient provided it, like the bureau, has sufficient light by day and night.

A summery looking guest bedroom

The different types of hangers, padded and otherwise, a shelf for hats and if the closet is of sufficient size, a stand for bags. Be sure to have bag stands, placed in front of the windows if there is no other place so that guest's bags may be opened comfortably.

An attractive summer room, not large, perhaps 15'x18', may be made most comfortable. The illustration shows one with walls of pale blue, a rug of light beige, painted furniture in a soft ivory, with the bedspreads and curtains of the popular candlewick sort. In fact a bedspread cut in two and finished with ball fringe is used for the curtains. A hooked rug, comfortable chair with a slip cover of chintz, the dressing table placed between the windows with a simple mirror above it, and its skirts made of embroidered marquisette which matches the glass curtains at the windows complete the furnishings.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL THEATRE

A skillfully contrived story, "Safari," which stars Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. and Madeleine Carroll, and which opened last night at the Bristol Theatre, an outstanding screen effort. Having for its principal locale a West African jungle, it offers a deft combination of romance, adventure and comedy.

The story has to do with a safari planned by a wealthy Baron, Tullio Carminati, who arrives on his yacht in M'Pola, with Madeline Carroll and Muriel Angelus as his guests. Madeline is determined to marry Carminati and welcomes the opportunity to arouse his jealousy by becoming deeply interested in Fairbanks, a big game hunter. Carminati has hired to lead the expedition.

GRAND THEATRE

Vivien Leigh and Robert Taylor already have been voted the outstanding romantic team of 1940, judging from the enthusiastic audience reception accorded "Waterloo Bridge," which opened last night at the Grand Theatre for an engagement of three days.

RITZ THEATRE

John Garfield was a "problem" child. Born on the lower East Side in New York of very poor parents, he was well on the way to becoming a juvenile delinquent when he landed in Angelo Patri's school for problem children.

The noted educator took him in hand, interested him in boxing and in oratory, helped him get a scholarship at a school of drama. It was with the Group Theatre that he rose to prominence, and while he was playing in "Golden Boy" that he accepted a Warner Bros. contract. His work in "Four Daughters" brought him immediate acclaim. He is currently starring in "Saturday's Children."
